MORE than 600 housebuyers in Bukit Rimau Indah, Section 32, Shah Alam, have been left in the lurch the last 15 years ago after the project was abandoned.

It was supposed to consist of several blocks of low and low-medium cost flats next to the existing double-storey and low-cost houses.

Three of the four blocks in Phase 4, which housed the low-cost units, were 80% completed while the final block was in the piling stage when the project was abandoned.

Phase 3 was supposed to comprise two blocks of low-medium cost flats.

Surrounding residents complain that the abandoned buildings are an eyesore with overgrown grass and creepers.

They claimed that it had also become a den for drug addicts.

Some of the unit purchasers visited their properties recently and found drug addicts have turned the premises into their "base."

When StarMetro arrived at the site, several unidentified men fled the area upon realising residents and housebuyers were making their way to the grounds.

The group of housebuyers managed to confront a few of the intruders who said they were hanging out there to relax, before they also hurried away on motorcycles.

The housebuyers action committee chairman Zairi Moh said he bought a low-cost unit the project in 2002 and was paying RM340 in monthly instalment for the property.

Although his block was 80% completed, he said the buildings were now rotting and he feared this would cause complications for the rehabilitation plan.

He said that he had taken up the matter with the Selangor Government and was waiting for positive action.

"The state has given its assurance that the project will be revived and they will not take a long time to do it.

through a tough time while waiting for their homes to be completed, so we hope the waiting will not be further prolonged," he added.

K. Anakili said she was among 85 families from Kampung Labu Padang who were offered the low-cost flats at RM35,000 by the developer.

She said two of her siblings also bought the low-cost flats in the project and faced the same fate after the project was abandoned.

"We are paying the monthly instalment on our loans as well as the rental for the houses we are currently staying in.

"I am paying RM750 rental for my home in Kampung Baru Hicom," she said.

Factory worker Halimah Mohd Nasri, 41, said she bought a medium-cost apartment in the project for RM65,000.
