

Not meant to be

This messy scene at a spot in Jalan 1/89A in Taman Ikhzan, Kuala Lumpur, is one reason why Kuala Lumpur City Hall has ordered that all charity recycling boxes in the city be removed. The road shoulder is strewn with used clothes donated by the public. This could be the work of people rummaging for recyclables to sell who did not bother to put the clothes back into the bin once they finished their search. — IZZRAFIQ ALIAS/The Star
