

Fuizah's Facebook post was only to her friends and was not set to public.

The government on Aug 15 announced the extension to Lynas' licence but set a condition for it to come up with a construction and financing plan for a permanent deposit facility (PDF) to store its radioactive waste.

"The construction of the PDF must be expedited to minimise the risk from the water leach purification (WLP) stockpile that is now at more than 580,000 tonnes at the temporary residue storage facility which is exposed to major floods," said the Atomic Energy Licensing Board (AELB).

AELB also required Lynas to shift its "cracking and leaching" phase of operations, which produces the radioactive waste, to overseas within four years.

It also asked Lynas to terminate its efforts to commercialise those waste by diluting them and turning them into fertiliser and instructed for funds for this research to be channelled to the government as collateral.

The more stringent condition has not soothed anger as Harapan leaders had in the past promised to shut down the Lynas plant.