

"The limited special offers not only benefit aspiring home buyers, but also safeguard the community, ensuring vacant units are taken up, and boosting occupancy which increases the value of the development in the long-term.

"We hope the previous homebuyers will understand and remain supportive of our efforts to ensure shared prosperity and sustainable development of the nation," it said on owners who had bought the house prior to the HOC campaign which offered a 30 per cent discount on the units.

It said PR1MA's mandate to provide quality affordable homes, with a focus on holistic development, among others, maintained status quo.

It said there were initiatives in the pipeline to deliver on the national housing agenda, in line with the government's aspirations to uplift the people's quality of life."

The government announced its commitment to provide one million affordable homes for the rakyat within the next 10 years, as stipulated under its National Housing Policy 2018 – 2025 launched earlier this year, which among others capped the price of affordable housing at RM300,000.

"PR1MA looks forward to work with the ministry to achieve this target," read the statement.

It was reported that the government has given PR1MA two years to settle issues it was facing, including a liability of RM23 billion.

PR1MA has since managed to reduce its liabilities to RM12 billion.

Zuraida had previously assured that PR1MA would not be dissolved and would ensure all projects related to the housing agency would be completed and sold to eligible buyers.
