

The ministry will also study the other issues posed by the buyers.

"There were some buyers asking about other issues such as services, defects and debts.

"As each project has different issues, we have asked the buyers to elect a representative for each project to continue with subsequent discussions.

"This is the moral responsibility of the Pakatan Harapan government. We want to meet with the buyers to know their situation and try to find the best solution, and at the same time, let them understand the government's position," said Zuraida.

The next round of discussions will be done separately with the representatives and is expected to happen in mid-December this year.

KPKT announced in September this year that the ministry has compiled around 500 "appeal" cases from PR1MA buyers nationwide.

The minister will be meeting PR1MA buyers in Kuching, Sarawak and Kota Kinabalu, Sabah next.

Zuraida met up with more than 60 PR1MA current owners today.
