

Last year, the Malay Mail reported that residents living in the vicinity of Highland Towers continue to ask for the surviving two blocks to be torn down.

“Everyone in the neighbourhood wants to see these eyesores demolished but it’s a complicated matter. Since the police shootout two years ago, things are quieter but the buildings are still being used by criminals, said Taman Sri Ukay Hill View Residents Association president Datuk Siti Hendon Chik.

The Highland Towers site has been abandoned for 27 years after a deadly landslide on Dec 11, 1993 led to the collapse of one of the three towers, killing 48 residents.

It has been reported that there are plans to redevelop the strategically-located land in Ulu Klang into a recreational park with 50 bungalows.
